[Hints:- Lord Buddha appointed a day for the collection of alms —devotees brought him gifts—rich men came with their precious Gifts—came an old and poor woman in a pomegranate—it was hardly eaten by her—Lord accepted it both hands coming from his seat.]

Lord Buddha and the Poor Woman

Lord Buddha appointed a day for the collection of alms from his devotees. They brought him different gifts. The rich and affluent devotees came with their precious gifts to offer their living god. These devotees thought Lord Buddha would be more pleased with their precious gifts than the ordinary ones given by others. Then an old and very poor devotee appeared there. She was so poor that she had no capacity to buy Lord Buddha any gift whatsoever. But the woman wanted to offer something to the spiritual saint. She had nothing but a pomegranate that she was eating. The old woman did not hesitate to offer the half-eaten pomegranate to her master. Lord Buddha was pleased with the poor woman's great sacrifice and true devotion. She wanted to offer everything she had. The great master, therefore, accepted the offer with both hands coming down from his seat.

Moral: An ordinary devoted offering is more important than a precious one.
