Chapter No 4 The Trumpet of the Swans

i. Who is Sam Beaver?

Ans Sam Beaver is an eleven-year-old boy who was walking through a forest when he heard a loud trumpet sound.

ii. How did the swan react when she felt watched?

Ans She became uneasy, twisted and peered around, and gazed intently at the land near the pond

iii. What does this part of the story teach us?

Ans It teaches us to respect nature, observe quietly, and not disturb animals in their natural habitats

iv. "I will go and knock him cold with my wing" Why did the cob say this?

Ans The cob said this because they had thought it would be safe and no one would be able to come there. So, when the cob saw the boy, he was angry that the boy had reached the heart of the jungle and had found out the place which they had thought was safe to lay the eggs. He was afraid that the boy might harm them and wanted to attack the boy to scare him away.

v. “You are in danger” Who said this to whom? What was the ‘danger’? How is the listener saved from the ‘danger’?

Ans The cob said this to the swan.

Here, ‘danger’ refers to the red fox, Who was creeping towards the swan as she stood on the grassy bank, preening her feathers.

Just as fox was about to jump on the swan, a stick flew through the air and hit the fox on the nose. The fox yelped in pain and turned away. This is how the swan was saved from danger.

vi. How did the swan and the cob protect their eggs?

Ans The swan kept her eggs warm. She poked each egg and adjusted herself to give the right amount of warmth to the eggs. The cob was close by to protect the swan and the eggs from any harm by way of an enemy.

vii. Why did the swan leave the eggs for some time? What did she do after leaving the nest?

Ans The swan was continuously sitting on her eggs. When she started feeling thirsty, she decided she could safely leave the eggs. For a few minutes. She stepped off the nest and entered the water and took in several quick sips. She then waded to a shallow place and ate the tender greens from under the water.
