	Example 1 - Buying Sweets for Diwali
	Buyer: Good morning! Do you have Diwali sweets?
	Shopkeeper: Good morning! Yes, we have laddoos, barfis, and jalebis.
	Buyer: How much is one box of laddoos
	Shopkeeper: It's ₹200 per box.
	Buyer: Okay, please give me one box.
	Shopkeeper: Sure! Here you go.
	Buyer: Thank you! Happy Diwali!
	Shopkeeper: Thank you! Same to you!

Example – 2 Buying Stationery

Buyer: Hello! I need some pencils and a notebook.
Shopkeeper: Sure! How many pencils do you want?
Buyer: I want five pencils, please.
Shopkeeper : Here's the money. Thank you!
Buyer: Here's the money. Thank you!
Shopkeeper: You're welcome! Visit again!

Example 3: Dialogue between two friends after Diwali vacation

Rohan : Hey Ananya! How was your Diwali vacation?
Ananya: It was fantastic! I went to my grandparents' village.
Rohan : Oh wow! That must have been fun.
Ananaya: Yes! We decorated the whole courtyard with diyas and flowers.
Rohan : I stayed in the city. We had a big family dinner and fireworks on the terrace.
Ananaya: That sounds exciting! Did you eat lots of sweets?
Rohan : Haha, yes! I think I ate too many laddoos.

Ananaya: Same here! But Diwali comes once a year, so it's okay.

Example 4 : Dialogue Between Two Friends About Exam Preparation:

	Yana : Hi Alisha! You look busy. Are you preparing for the exams?
	Alisha: Yes, Yana. The final exams are starting next week, and I'm nervous
	Yana: Don't worry! Have you made a study timetable?
	Alisha: Not yet. I don't know how to manage time for all subjects.
	Yana: It's simple. Spend more time on the subjects you find difficult.
	Alisha: That's a good idea. I struggle a bit with Maths and Science
	Yana: Then start with those. We can study Maths together after school.
	Alisha: Really? That would be great help!
	Yana: Sure! And don't forget to take short breaks between subjects.
	Alisha: Thank you, Yana! I'll make my timetable tonight and start tomorrow
