

Class 6 .Poem: Being brave at night

Introduction of the Author – Edgar Albert Guest

Edgar Albert Guest was a popular American poet, often known as the “People’s Poet” because his poems were simple, warm, and easy to understand. He was born on 20 August 1881 in England and later moved to the United States.

Guest wrote more than 11,000 poems, many of which were published in newspapers and widely read by ordinary people. His poems usually focused on everyday life, family values, courage, and positive thinking.

The poem “Being Brave at Night” reflects his style of writing—simple, imaginative, and meaningful. It shows how children deal with fear and highlights the importance of bravery and the comfort of family.

Summary of the poem “Being Brave at Night” (Class 6)

The poem is about a young child who faces frightening dreams at night. He imagines scary creatures like an elephant, a giant, and ghosts chasing him. Despite feeling afraid, he tries to act brave by not screaming and thinking quickly. Each time, he cleverly escapes and goes to sleep beside his father, where he feels safe and protected.

The poem highlights that children often imagine fears in the dark, but they can overcome them with courage and calmness. It also shows the importance of a parent’s presence, as the child gains confidence and security from his father. ☑

Extra questions (3.Being Brave at Night)

Q1. What frightening dream did the child see about the elephant?

Answer:

The child dreamt that a huge elephant with shining tusks was chasing him. Its trunk waved in the air, blowing out steam like jets. Although it seemed ready to eat him, the child controlled his fear and did not scream.

Q2. How did the child escape from the giant in his dream?

Answer:

In the dream, the giant had three heads and many arms, breathing fire and threatening to grind the child’s bones. However, the child cleverly fooled him and quickly escaped by crawling into bed with his father for safety.

Q3. What does the poem suggest about the child’s bravery?

Answer:

The poem shows that the child tries to act brave by not showing fear during frightening dreams. Even when chased by ghosts or monsters, he pretends to be fearless, though he still seeks comfort and protection by going to his father's bed.

Q4. Describe the child's encounter with ghosts in the poem.

Answer:

The child once dreamed of being chased by forty shiny white ghosts. He ran around the room, tricking them into thinking he might stop. When they jumped on his bed, they were surprised to find he had already escaped to his father.

Q5. What is the central idea of the poem?

Answer:

The poem highlights a child's imagination and fear during the night. It shows how children try to appear brave in scary situations but still need the comfort of their parents. It beautifully captures innocence, courage, and dependence at the same time.

POST READING

A. 1. The poet tells us the time here to show that it was very late at night.

2. The elephant the child is talking about is not real, because it is not possible that an elephant might enter his room late at night, spouting jets of steam and trying to eat him. Elephants don't eat human beings.

B. The child also saw a horrible giant and forty ghosts.

C. To avoid monsters in the night, the child crawls into bed with his Dad. He feels this is a simple and effective way to escape them, because his Dad would beat them up and chase them away, so the monsters would never come there.

D. According to the child, the monsters just hang around children's rooms to snap and snarl and bite, and laugh if they can make children scream for help.

E. 1. The child feels proud of himself for having fooled the giant and escaped.

2. Other words or phrases in the poem which tell us this are:

a. a better thought I had....

b. Oh Gee! But they were mad/To find that I had slipped away....

c. But I don't ever yell out loud. I'm not that sort of lad,

Summary of the chapter “Everyday Stories of Climate Change”

The chapter explains how climate change is affecting our daily lives, especially through problems like water scarcity. It describes how rising temperatures are melting glaciers, which increases sea levels and leads to floods in coastal areas such as Khulna in Bangladesh.

The text also explains that floods do not always mean more usable water. When floodwater recedes, it often leaves behind salty and contaminated water, making it unsafe for drinking, farming, and daily use. This creates serious challenges for people living in such regions.

The chapter emphasizes that climate change is a global issue, but we can take small steps to help. By saving water, reducing pollution, and spreading awareness, we can contribute to protecting the environment and ensuring a better future for the next generations.

Lesson -4 Every day Stories of Climate change

WHILE READING

1. happy, safe
2. In class that day, Jasmine was going to learn about climate change.
3. Due to climate change, the intensity of bush fires is increasing in Australia.

4. First, the teacher was going to discuss Bangladesh. We know this because that is the first place listed in the textbook.
5. Raju exclaimed 'yuck' because the water tasted salty.
- 6.Examples: happy, busy
7. Since the water in the taps is salty, they are going to the river to fetch water. We know this because they are carrying pots.
8. Rohima's friend was planning to move to Dhaka with her family, so that they could get more jobs.
9. When it was raining, Rohima was collecting rainwater from the roofing sheets. She added a water purifying tablet to the storage pot, as the water collected from the roofing sheet might not have been very clean.
10. Rohima and her family generally never plant seeds directly in the ground, as they would die in the salty soil. But watermelon seeds can grow in salty soil, so these were planted directly in the ground.
11. The two factors that caused the salinisation of the river in Khulna are: (a) climate change and (b) development projects, including seawalls, that have silted up the rivers.

A.

1. Climate change, which has made the land and water salty, has affected Rohima and her family in the following ways:

- a. They have to go far from home to get drinking water.
- b. They are unable to plant vegetables directly in the ground.

2. Rohima and her family have taken the following measures to deal with the effects of climate change in their lives:

- a. They try to harvest rainwater when they can.
- b. They use planters to plant their vegetables so that they don't die

C. Yes, the impact of climate change in Bangladesh can affect India too, since both countries share a common border and similar climactic conditions. Rivers that flow in India flow through Bangladesh too, and both countries have a coastline next to the Bay of Bengal. Hence, India will also be affected by climate change in Bangladesh
