My Summer Picnic

Last Sunday, my family and I went for a wonderful summer picnic to a nearby riverside park. We started early in the morning to beat the heat. I helped my mother to pack a basket full of sandwiches, fresh mangoes, and cold lemonade.

When we arrived, the cool breeze felt amazing. We spread a large mat under the shade of a huge banyan tree. I spent the afternoon playing some games with my brother and splashing my feet in the shallow water. In the afternoon, we sat together, shared our delicious food, and laughed at my father's funny stories. It was a perfect day away from screens and heat, making it my favourite summer memory.

I watched butterflies flutter near the bright daisies and listened to the happy chirping of birds in the trees. The sun shone warmly on our faces, making the day feel like a perfect adventure. I will always remember the laughter, tasty treats, and the joyful moments shared with my family.

Monsoon Season

The monsoon season, also known as the rainy season, is one of the most awaited times of the year. In India, it usually begins in June and lasts until September. After the long, hot days of summer, the first monsoon clouds bring a sigh of relief to everyone.

When the monsoon arrives, nature undergoes a beautiful change. The sky turns dark with heavy grey clouds, and the sound of thunder fills the air. When it rains, the dry, brown Earth turns into a lush green carpet. Trees get a fresh wash, and flowers begin to bloom. Rivers, ponds, and lakes that had dried up during summer quickly fill up with water again.

The monsoon is very important for farmers. Most crops, like rice and corn, need plenty of water to grow. Without enough rain, farmers would find it very difficult to provide food for the country. For children, the monsoon is a time for fun. Many of us love to make paper boats and float them in the flowing rainwater. Wearing colourful raincoats and carrying bright umbrellas makes walking in the rain exciting.

The monsoon season is a true blessing from nature. It brings life to the plants, joy to the animals, and hope to the farmers. I like this season very much.

Read the following passage and choose the correct options.

Once there was a tiny seed lying under the soil in a quiet garden. The seed had a big dream—it wanted to become a tall and strong tree. Every day, it listened to the sounds around it. It heard birds singing, children laughing, and the wind whispering stories. One morning, dark clouds covered the sky, and rain began to fall. The seed felt happy because the rain gave it water to drink. Slowly, the seed started to grow roots under the ground. Soon, a small green shoot came out of the soil and reached toward the sunlight.

Days passed, and the little plant grew taller. The sun gave it warmth, the rain gave it water, and the gardener gave it care. Birds came and rested on its branches, and insects buzzed around it. The plant felt proud and useful.

After many months, the small plant became a big tree. It gave shade to tired people and shelter to animals. The little seed's big dream finally came true because it was patience and never gave up.
